That there is a difference of opinion as to whether Hopkinsville needs another bank all know, but when a deposit bank that will pay interest after a certain time on deposits is mentioned to the economical man, woman or boy, they are glad to hear of the probability of having a place where they can keep their money and let it make a little more for them. Of course that is where small amounts will be left. Such a bank, some think, would be of great advantage to hose who are only able to lay saide a little of their weekly carnings. It would cause such pepple to be economical. They would randauly become more so each day, and the general results would be beenfelial to all—men would the become more able to pay their debts and the too general credit system which prevails would, to a certain extent, be reduced.

On the other hand, it would seem that merchants would have no reason to withfraw their business from the bank which has for so many years extended favors to them—often helping them by allowing them to out at the end of the year with any profit whatever.

Of course this is the all important question to be considered. Will it pay? first enters into every new enterprise. The Kentuckian is not financier enough to figure it out or a prophet enough to foretell what would be the result. As a dissemnator of news and working for the public good, we simply mention the arguments pro and con, leaving it to those who are better qualified to settle the question. We want to see Hopkinsville grow and keep on growing. If more banks are necessary, let us have them. If the people are to be benefited by a deposit bank, let it come.

in the colleges and universities. The "scientifie" course gains more and more at the expense of the "classical" course. The tendency is toward the severely practical and away from the purely intellectual and sentimental. We are becoming specialists. The young man is encouraged to know one thing and to know it thoroughly. When he has acquired the knowling of any thing only one idea.

This is not good for the nation or the individual. It means a nare rowing of the mental horizon and a subordination of everything to the purely material idea. The True Value of Latin and Greek
Is Discussed When Colleges
Turn Out Students.

College commencements give rise to discussion of modern educational methods, including, of course, the old question as to the utility of Greek and Latin in the quipment of the graduate. Opinions differ as widely as ever because there is something to be said on both sides of the question, says the Chicago Chronicle.

On the one side it is contended that a man cannot have too much knowledge, and this contention cannot be gainsaid. It is also true that mastery of the so-called dead languages constitutes a source of intellectual enjoyment and satisfaction to him who has mastered them. It is not mere tradition which keeps alive the study of Greek and Roman literature. There is an intrinsic value to that literature which is a parceiated even by those who do not enjoys first hand familiarity with it. It may be admitted that the ability to read Homer or Horaci in the original is not likely to help a man in the acquisition of riebes, but the acquisition of wealth is not the only satisfaction of life. If we were strictly to limit ourselves to those things that contribute to material prosperity, the word of the contribute to material prosperity, the time would eliminate the learned languages from the college curriculum would legically abolish music, the drama and the facility of the contribute to material prosperity. Fraud Exposed.

A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell ministrations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit, through stealing the reputation of remedies which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years. A sure protection, to you, is our name on the wrapper. Look for it on all Dr. King's, or Bucklen's remedies, as all others mere imitations. H. E. BUCKLEN & Conference imitations. H. E. TO AVOID LYNCHING.

Negro Who Assaulted White Woman Taken to Lexington.

Winchester, Ky., Aug. 15.—Yes-terday about noon Mrs. Jasper Case, an excellent white woman of Col-ville, this county, was assaulted by a negro, who was identified this morning as Sam Hisie, a negro res-ident of this town and an exconvict. He also attempted to catch Mrs. Bond, a neighbor, but she eluded him. He was captured in Paris and identified by both women. Judge J. M. Benton, of this circuit, ordered him to Lexington, as it was feared his presence here would have caused a lynching.

There Is Crookedness in the Air, as an Experienced Showman Proved.

"When the circus comes to town aWhen the circus comes to town everybody goes crooked," observed a side-show orator out of the wealth of his experience. And just before the performance in the big tent he proved it to me—in a way, relates the Pilgrim. He told me beforehand what he was going to do and it was a test. A stranger gave him a $5 bill in payment for seven side-show tickets. The man in the "pulpit" thrust at him the tickets and a handful of silver. He had purposely "short changed" him to the extent of $1. By the time the stranger had reached the side-show entrance he discovered side-show entrance he discovered side-show entrance he discovered the shortage. In two strides he was in front of the ticket seller's "pulpit" clamoring "fraud." "Yew've swindled me onten a dollar!" he shouted. The ticket seller heard him through, apolo-gized and gave him two fresh, clean $1 bills, one of which lay evenly upon the other. Without a word the man seized them and dashed into the tent. I followed him, knowing precisely what had dashed into the tent. I followed him, knowing precisely what had been done. Joining his friends, he told them of the mistake the ticket seller had made and hughed over the ease with which the circus had defrauded itself for his benefit. The shoe had slipped to the other foot, you see. He had "beat a circus," it was the sum of his ambition; his wildest hopes had been realized. He was watching the "Motor of the precise" it was the sum of his ambitum; his wildest hopes had been realized.

He was watching the "Mexican knife thrower" when a hand touched his shoulder. He looked up into the eyes of the ticket and into the eyes of the ticket seller.

"Come here a minute," said the latter, and drew him to one side.

Then he explained in an understene. "My friend, I thought I'd test you. I did short change' you a dollar. Oh, I knew you'd be back. I gave you your dollar; you were entitled to it. But in addition I gave you notther dollar—a bill—a fresh, clean $1 bill. I waited awhile, but I couldn't see you tearing a hole in that canvas to get to me with it. Now, my friend, shell out that dollar before I knock your bloomin' head off."

He shelled.
